

Where can hope, recovery, and a new life happen?

GABRIEL'S KEY

*Robert "Dean" Langdon, president;

In an amazing undertaking of mammoth proportions, two visionary leaders, with the help of nearly 100 leading professionals in the treatment of autism, are working to change that.

Gabriel's Key, an envisioned 600-acre city north of Atlanta that will cost an estimated $1.4 billion to build and 12 years to complete, is moving forward from concept to a dream come true. It is not just the biggest project of its kind in the South, it's the only project of its kind in the world.

Gabriel's Key will unlock the possibility of the patients and families of autism, Down's syndrome and other neurological challenges, and birth defects to actually live happy productive lives. It's a life-changing entity which is long overdue.

Why do we need this city? Because these conditions don't just happen to a child, they happen to a family who desperately needs a community. Help us live this dream . . .

Imagine a child with a healthy, brilliant, wonderful mind trapped inside a body that prohibits him from communicating with his family and the world outside.
